Excerpt from The Alabama Arbitration

Soon after the outbreak of hostilities in 1861 in the United States between the Northern and the Southern States over the Slavery question, the Confederate States, in order to injure the power of the Union States by striking and destroying the mercantile marine of the latter, sought with great energy, tenacity and skill to create a navy sufficiently strong to force the Union maritime commerce to seek the shelter of a neutral flag. And in this course their hasty recognition as belligerents by England helped them very much.
