"You know I'm your best friend and would do anything for you, dude....but, I'm not kissing you!" he teased. Hearing that made me laugh and lightened my mood. That is, until we rounded the next corner. Blue and red lights were flashing near my house. I could see a portly police officer putting my Mom in the back of a squad car. She was handcuffed! I forgot about Connor and my note from April, and sprinted to my house as the police car containing my Mom drove off. I don't know when I started crying, but tears were streaming down my face. At first, I figured it was just snowflakes that landed on me, melting. I was screaming, trying to catch my mother. I didn't know what was going on. As I reached my house, a tall, middle-aged, uniformed officer asked if I was James Nelson. "Where did you take my Mom?" I screamed, through my sobbing and tears. "It'll be alright, son." The officer told me. "Are you James Nelson?" "YES! YES! Why did you take my Mom away?" I demanded. "Because she isn't your Mom," the tall officer answered. That's all I remembered before I fainted.
