The practice of luring game to shore with the use of small animals dates back to antiquity. But only the Nova Scotia-bred retrievers perform the added service of fetching the prize for their masters. This is the best-selling story of the Nova Scotia Duck Tolling Retriever and the men and women who bred them, trained them and brought them to prominence. These intelligent fox-like dogs with red coats and distinctive markings have found a place in the hearts of thousands of owners in Canada and across the United States as both sporting dogs and family pets.
